Shanghai, China

To whom it may concern,

Huang ayi (黄有得) has worked for us since we moved to Shanghai almost 3 years ago. In that time, I can honestly say that she has literally become part of our family. While she was with us, her primary duty was taking care of our son from the time he was 8 months old until he was 3 ½ years old. It is with regret that we are leaving and must part way with her.

I cannot say enough good things about her. She is great at taking care of our son. She is really responsive to our requests and adapted very well to our more western style of parenting. When looking at her interacting with our son, one can clearly see that she cares deeply about him. She also takes our little one's education to heart, reading with him for extended periods or guiding him through playful learning games and allowing independent play. She is very patient and obviously takes pride in his progress and development.

Aside from childrearing duties, she handled lunch and evening meals from helping with grocery shopping to cooking all the way to doing the dishes. She's a great cook and while she's more at ease with Chinese cuisine she can also cook different western dishes and is eager to learn. She taught herself to cook many western dishes from translated western cookbooks we provided with great success. We also took some time to teach her our own recipes, which she was eager to learn and successfully mastered.

When it comes to cleaning, Huang ayi also really shines. As soon as there's a lull in the daily routine, be it naps or independent play sessions, she takes the opportunity to put the house in order. As the little one was getting older she also started including him in the various tasks as she was going. She time and again showed great initiative so we found the house spotless when we returned.

We also have a dog and a cat and Huang ayi loves pets. She helped us take care of them with feeding morning and evening, walks during the day, cleaning the cat litter, etc.

Huang ayi is wonderful, is a great cook, loves kids, cleans well, is reliable, fun to be with, responsible and adaptable. Those are all the reasons we would highly recommend her. We would be pleased to answer any questions or provide further information as required. In this respect, please to not hesitate to contact me at the following coordinates.
